

4. The Group Project Survivor

Genre: Comedy

Age Range: 16-30

Length: 2 Minutes

Emotional Themes: Frustration, Sarcasm, Resilience

Scene Description

A student explains the chaos of carrying an entire group project alone.

Monologue

There were five people in the group. Five. Do you know how many actually worked? One. Me.

The others contributed ideas. And by ideas, I mean excuses. One person was "just about to start." Another was "waiting for inspiration." One vanished so completely that I wasn't entirely sure they were enrolled in the class anymore.

Every group meeting sounded the same. "Don't worry, I'll do my part tonight." Then tomorrow would arrive. Then next week. Then somehow we'd be discussing the deadline.

Eventually I stopped asking for help. I accepted my fate. I wasn't part of a group project anymore. I was a one-person emergency response team.

The funniest part happened near the deadline. Suddenly everyone became active. People who hadn't spoken in weeks appeared with opinions. Not work. Opinions.

And when we finally submitted the project, everyone said, "Great teamwork, guys."

Teamwork. A beautiful concept. I've heard wonderful things about it.
