Age Range: 18-30

Length: 1 Minute

Emotional Themes: Family, Legacy, Identity

Scene Description

While sorting through old belongings, a young adult discovers their father's jacket.

Monologue

It still smells like him. I know that's impossible, It's been years. But every time I pick up this jacket... I'm ten years old again.

I remember thinking my dad knew everything. That he had all the answers. That he couldn't fail. Then I got older. And I realized he was figuring things out just like the rest of us. He made mistakes. Big ones. We argued. We disagreed. Sometimes I didn't even like him. But I loved him. And now... Every year I understand him a little more.

Maybe that's what growing up is. Realizing your heroes were human. And loving them anyway.
