Monologue

I got in..I actually got in.Do you know how many times I imagined this moment?How many nights I stayed awake thinking about it..?I thought I'd be celebrating, I thought I'd be jumping around the room,but all I've done is stare at this letter..

Because suddenly it's real.For years this was a dream.Dreams are easy,dreams don't ask you to leave home,dreams don't ask you to say goodbye,dreams don't make your mother cry when she thinks you're not looking.Everyone keeps telling me this is an opportunity.

And they're right..It is,It's everything I've worked for..Everything.But nobody talks about what it costs.Nobody talks about how terrifying it is when the future finally knocks on your door,because now I have to answer.

I have to decide whether I'm brave enough to become the person I've always wanted to be..And honestly?I don't know if I am,but I know one thing.If I let fear decide for me...I'll regret it for the rest of my life.
