A young adult is leaving their hometown tomorrow to pursue a dream. Standing alone at the train station the night before, they wrestle with fear and excitement.

Monologue

Tomorrow..One word,one train,one decision.Funny how your whole life can fit inside a suitcase.I used to stand here and dream about leaving,about seeing the world,about becoming someone bigger than the person everyone thought I was..And now it's finally happening,so why am I terrified?I've spent years telling myself I was ready.Ready for opportunity.Ready for adventure.Ready for change.But standing here tonight...I realize I wasn't afraid of staying,I was afraid of succeeding,because if this works...There's no excuse anymore.No one to blame.No hometown to hide behind,Just me.And the life I've always wanted.

Maybe courage isn't being fearless..Maybe courage is buying the ticket anyway.
